A San Francisco landmark. In the heart of Mission Bay.

Designed by award-winning architect Ricardo Legorreta, known for his signature use of vibrant colors and natural light to create geometric forms that are modern, yet timeless. The William J. Rutter Center at UCSF Mission Bay opened in October of 2005. It contains a world-class fitness and recreation center with a rooftop swimming pool and climbing wall, a restaurant, and The Mission Bay Conference Center at UCSF.

UCSF has been a catalyst for transforming the Mission Bay neighborhood into a vibrant biotechnology, research district that is a science focused city under on going construction.

The William J. Rutter Center is located just south of downtown San Francisco. The social center of UCSF's 43-acre life sciences campus for teaching and research, the building's focal point is an 80-foot-tall light-filled atrium, topped by a dramatic skylight.

Innovation and Interaction.

Welcome to the The Mission Bay Conference Center – a dynamic, distinctive meeting venue in the William J. Rutter Center at The University of California, San Francisco. Located in the heart of San Francisco's Mission Bay neighborhood – a vital hub of health care, business and technology enterprise – our state-of-the-art facility features over 12,500 square feet of dedicated conference space.

We invite you to look inside to learn more about hosting your next event at this unique, dramatic locale.

Inspired Hospitality. It's in the details.
